90 Days of Rising

Name:

Start date:

My intention for these 90 days:

A N O T E F R O M A M A N D A

I spent years building a career that looked impressive on paper. A Nuclear Engineering Submariner. Technical expertise that took a decade to accumulate. A clear identity — I was the woman who could do the hard things.

Then I set out to build something of my own. A coaching business. And I ran into something no course, no mentor, no strategy had prepared me for.

I had the tools. I knew the steps. And still I didn't move.

I understood exactly what I should do next. Some days I even had it in the right order. And still — I hesitated. I rethought. I changed direction. I knew the step, and I didn't take it.

For a long time I thought I was just slow. Undisciplined. Not cut out for it. I was wrong. Here is what I eventually understood, and it changed everything:

The thing that keeps you stuck is almost never the strategy. It's the identity underneath it.

You can have every tool. You can have them perfectly sequenced. And you will still stall — because what decides whether you take the step isn't whether you know it. It's whether you've become the person who takes it. The one who charges that price without flinching. Who puts herself forward. Who says "I'm the one for this" and believes it.

Nobody coaches that part. They hand you more strategy — another funnel, another framework, another list — when the block was never the doing. It was the becoming.

And here is the part that matters most: you cannot solve this from inside your own head. You can't out-think an identity block while it's still circling silently in there — it just spins. It has to come out. Onto the page, where you can finally see it, question it, and move past it.

So I built this journal for the part everyone skips.

This isn't a gratitude diary or a pretty notebook. It's a thinking space, a vision space, and a release space — ninety days of getting what's underneath out of your head and onto the page. The quiet work that turns "I know what I should do" into "I did it." The research is clear: writing your thoughts, the brilliant and the messy, clears the way to think, to decide, to sleep, and to move. Morning to evening. Ninety days.

Use it honestly. Write the messy things. Write the ambitious things. Write the things you haven't said out loud yet.

That is where the rising begins.

— Amanda

HOW TO USE THIS JOURNAL

MORNING · 5-10 minutes

Open here before the day begins. Before the messages, before the to-do list, before anyone needs anything from you. Your win from yesterday reminds you that you are already moving. Your positive for today sets direction, not pressure. The open space is yours — use it for thinking, planning, dreaming, or simply clearing your head.

THE DIVIDER · The quote

Each day carries one quote — some from women who went before you, some from me. Read it slowly. Let it land. Then go and live your day.

EVENING · 10-15 minutes

This is where the research lives. Writing down what's in your head before sleep — the good, the unresolved, the circling thoughts — transfers it out of your nervous system and onto the page. Your brain stops working overtime. You sleep. Studies consistently show this reduces pre-sleep cognitive arousal. The evening section gives you space to brain dump without judgement, reflect, and close the day with intentional gratitude.

THE 90 DAYS

Ninety days is not a magic number. It is a commitment. Long enough to see yourself change. Short enough to stay motivated. By day 90, you will have written your way into a clearer version of who you are becoming.

YESTERDAY'S WIN

What did I achieve, however small, that I want to acknowledge?

MY POSITIVE FOR TODAY

What one thing am I choosing to focus on or feel good about today?

SPACE — THOUGHTS · WORK · VISIONS

This space is yours. Think. Plan. Dream. Brainstorm. There are no rules here.

EVENING

BRAIN DUMP

Everything in your head — worries, ideas, admin, feelings. Get it out. No filter.

TONIGHT'S REFLECTION

One thing I am trusting the universe with tonight:

GRATITUDE TO THE UNIVERSE

I am grateful for...
